2010 CONDUCTIVE GARBOIL GRANT

GARBOIL (NOUN, ARCHAIC): TUMULT; DISTURBANCE; DISORDER

AWARD AMOUNT: $3,000, NON-RESTRICTED

APPLICANTS MUST BE SEATTLE RESIDENTS AND HAVE A SIGNIFICANT CONNECTION TO PIONEER SQUARE (FOR EXAMPLE, KEEPING A STUDIO AND/OR LIVING THERE, HAVING CREATED WORK THAT CONNECTED IN A SIGNIFICANT WAY WITH THE AREA, ETC.).

DEADLINE: MONDAY, JUNE 7, 2009 (5PM). NOT A POSTMARK DEADLINE

Seattle artist Su Job envisioned and endowed an annual non-restricted grant of $3000 for artists who have demonstrated a profound ability to challenge the limits of creative discourse and its effects on our society, pushing the artistic act beyond accepted limits, definitions, or purposes while engaging audiences outside the aesthetic industrial complex.

THE REASONS BEHIND THE CONDUCTIVE GARBOIL GRANT

“Since the industrial revolution, the role of art in society has gone through profound changes, more than any other period in the history of civilization. When we examine the role of art in ancient cultures, its use in ritual and ceremony, the contrast is significant.

Over the course of western history, institutions of power, both religious and state, have used art as a propaganda tool and vehicle to further their own agendas, which may in fact not serve the best interests of society. During the twentieth century, and especially with the advent of television, market forces completely subsumed the power of the image, and in a broader sense how all creative acts are perceived by society. Today, in ever more sophisticated ways, art is bound to consumer culture, and ultimately, a servant of the capitalist agenda.

The result of these developments is a profound disconnection in the lives of everyday people with the creative process, and the initial impetus for the creative act.

The purpose of this grant is to recognize an artist who incorporates the creative process into a life practice that diffuses the boundaries between professional activities, social responsibilities, and respect for the people that compose the community we all share.”

-Su Job, December, 2008

APPLICATION & SELECTION PROCESS

Artists or artist teams working in any media or discipline can apply for this grant. Su was interested in acknowledging persons who are committed to an artistic practice that connects with community and society. For example, that could mean the artist(s) is producing cutting-edge political performance and has taken that art experience into the streets and out of the gallery setting. It could also mean that the artist(s) exhibits their work commercially, but always opens his/her/their studio to young people to share the joy of the creative process.

Su Job was a woman of extraordinary energy and drive, fiercely dedicated to her art. Although she was very busy, she always made time for her friends, students and those she mentored. She had an intense curiosity about life, a bold intellect and believed totally in the power of art to shape community as well as individual lives. She also held that the value of art should transcend the buying and selling of objects. She believed deeply in the creative experience as a way of connecting with others, and that artists should take responsibility in their communities to stimulate ideas, conversation and change. Su worked hard as a teacher, business owner and community activist. This grant opportunity seeks artists with many of the same attributes and attitudes.

THE PANEL SELECTION PROCESS

A five member panel comprised of the 2009 Conductive Garboil Grant recipient, Pioneer Square business owners and artists and who live and work in the neighborhood will review eligible applications and establish a shortlist of finalists. Panelists will then conduct studio visits with the finalists to determine the 2010 award recipient. The composition of the panel changes annually.
